Goldsmith / Jeweller Vacancy

may also be suitable for silversmith with Ute Decker, artist jeweller, London

From October 2017 there will be a part-time opportunity for an experienced goldsmith / jeweller to join Ute Decker in her central London studio at Cockpit Arts. Ute Decker creates one-off and limited-edition sculptural and architectural pieces that are exhibited internationally. She is a leading proponent of the ethical jewellery movement.

Attention to detail are required for this hands-on bench role and the successful candidate will be working closely alongside the artist.

Required Skills

- technical proficiency and a minimum of 2 years prior professional experience on the bench are essential
- preparing metals and finishing pieces
- bench tasks include filing (lots of filing edges), texturing, soldering, cleaning, polishing
- you should be confident to work both independently and closely alongside the artist
- the role will be a minimum of 2 days per week – days can be flexible
- on occasion, assistance during exhibitions and fairs

Additional Skills (not essential but a bonus)

- If you furthermore have good administrative skills, good computer and social media skills there would be an opportunity for a further 3 days a month assisting with office and administrative tasks to keep this busy practice well organised.

The successful candidate will be

- detail-oriented and patient, as most work involves completing a series of careful steps to the highest quality
- well organised, can multi-task and prioritise effectively, with meticulous attention to detail and quality
- a good problem solver with the ability to listen and learn
- pro-active with a positive approach

Remuneration

Competitive salary based on your skills and experience, starting £ 20.000 to £ 30 000 pro rata, p/a.

To Apply

If you believe you can bring passion and meticulous attention to detail, we would like to hear from you.
